| LH03006 | Networking | 1 minute | Global |

Description:

You wouldn't think you could learn a lot in 60 seconds, but au contraire! You can plug in your phone, rub your dog's belly, floss your teeth, take 10 deeps breaths and learn about habits and networking! Although, we don't recommend flossing and rubbing your dog's belly at the same time, but breathing and learning about habits is a slam dunk! You'll be happy you did it.

| LH02005 | Food Safety - Cross Contamination | 25 minutes | Global |

Description:

Some foods just don't go together, however, mixing foods accidentally can do more than just ruin your dinner. Cross contamination can pose serious health risks. Whether through the transfer of allergens, or bacteria being passed from one foodstuff to another, cross contamination is best avoided. What we need to do is create a resource that helps users understand what cross contamination really is, as well as identify and control the risks. Kitchen sponges can harbor 10 million bacteria per square inch! Yuck. This means they can be one of the main causes of food cross-contamination. So, change those filthy dish cloths and sponges frequently! In fact, do it NOW!
